For the past two decades, The Forum Shops at Caesars Palace has been one of the city's fashion headquarters for well-heeled luxuristas. Celebrating its 20-year anniversary this month, The Forum Shops has always offered Las Vegas the most fashion-forward brands that include Salvatore Ferragamo, David Yurman, Giuseppe Zanotti, Judith Ripka, Jimmy Choo, Pucci, LaPerla, and Reed Krakoff, as pictured in these pages.

Measuring 636,000 square feet and with 160 of the world's most prestigious fashion retailers, it's a shopping mecca that Plutus, Roman God of Wealth & Luxury, could have only dreamed of as a possibility for the merchants of Rome.

Director of Mall Marketing and Business Development Maureen Crampton of Simon Property Group has been with The Forum Shops since the beginning and witnessed its growth first hand. "Shopping in Las Vegas went through the most impressive transformation -- more than a showcase for clothing, shoes, cosmetics and other items; the Las Vegas shopping center became an 'experience' inspired by the opening of The Forum Shops at Caesars," says Crampton. "With breathtaking Roman architecture, painted ceilings, impressive dining, and retail like none other in Las Vegas -- The Forum Shops was an immediate and overwhelming success bringing a heady mix of designer shops and luxury boutiques like Versace, Gucci, Armani, Escada, St. John, to name just a few, to the Las Vegas market."

Well-known designers continue to flock to The Forum Shops as evidenced by the swim and resort wear fashions pictured in Luxury's "Summer Flashback" fashion feature. "Our customers have always been able to find the most on-trend pieces of each season. We have something for every whim and desire, whether its inspired by this season's '60s retro vibe or the neon brights popular right now, we have created a magnetic formula of theme design, high-fashion, and gourmet food that draws tens of thousands of people daily."

Plutus couldn't have done it better himself.
